

If You Need to Send or Receive Flowers

I realize many bloggers get paid to endorse a product. However, that is not the case here. It takes an exceptional product, high quality, and great customer service for me to go out on a limb and support it. When I find something that consistently impresses me, I feel compelled to share it with you, friend to friend.

With the holidays around the corner, you may be sending flowers more than usual. Last September, I treated myself to monthly flowers....well, just because...why not? ☐ In a previous life when I was working in San Francisco, I would always stop by the street florist and buy myself a bunch of fresh flowers every Friday. It made me happy.

I am rather discriminating when it comes to flowers. My monthly subscription with The Bouqs Co. was prompted by a discount coupon (20% off and free shipping)) I had received online and I thought I'd give it a go.

On the 12th of each month I receive a box of flowers delivered by FedEx. In order to use Bouqs, you don't have to subscribe as they also send flowers one order at a time. Bouqs is my exclusive flower resource because I have received such good feedback from friends and relatives who have received Bouq flowers from us.

The flowers come directly from the grower and are packed very, very well. You can also go online to manage your subscription and change your flowers at any time.

Each box typically has 3 separately wrapped bouquets and many of the blossoms are not open yet.

The ends are trimmed before submerging into water.

After a few days in a vase, the buds open up beautifully and I have never been disappointed with an arrangement. Some of them seem to last weeks, too, especially if I change the water every few days and re-trim the stems.

Here are some pictures of some of the bouquets I have received.

This tropical one arrived last December and it was a pleasant surprised as I was expecting something with evergreens.

Yesterday, my November flowers were delivered. The lilies are still closed but I am especially fond of the color of the thistle.

I have been using The Bouqs Co. for over a year and have had enough experience with them to endorse their product. If you go online, they offer 20% off and free shipping. They have a wonderful selection and ordering online is very easy. Hopefully you will be as pleased with them as I am.
